Dear Members and Friends of St. Mary's, St. Patrick's and St. Peter's Cathedral:

Last Sunday we heard John's version of the feeding of the 5000. Throughout this month of August, we will hear the rest of John 6, as Jesus unfolds the Eucharistic meaning of the miracle and speaks of himself as the Bread of Life. The sixth chapter of John stands as one of the central New Testament interpretations of the Sacrament. It is virtually on a par with the accounts of the institution of the Eucharist at the Last Supper in the first three Gospels and in First Corinthians. Some scholars argue that John 6 is in effect the Fourth Gospel's account of the institution of the Eucharist, since John does not report it in his lengthy description of the Last Supper.

As we listen to John 6 through this month, it is important also to be attentive to the lessons that precede the Gospel.

We hear wonderful accounts from the Old Testament of God's care for his people in the context of feeding them. Today we are reminded of the manna in the wilderness that sustained Israel through her time in the desert journeying to the promised land. And of course we can call the Eucharist viaticum—'food along the way' or 'food for the journey.' While in more recent centuries the term has come to be associated with communion at the time of death, the more ancient usage was to see its meaning as food along the journey, the food that sustains us throughout the pilgrimage to the Kingdom of God.

The readings from Ephesians are equally important. In this letter Paul is deeply concerned with the unity, mission and integrity of the Church, which he sees as the extension of Christ in time and space. Today's second reading is in many ways just a simple call to decency and Christian morality. It means, as Paul says, putting on a new self. Only by putting on a new self can we carry on the journey. And that new self is sustained by the food for the journey, the Bread of Life, Jesus Christ.

In Christ,
Fr. Klein
