Dear Members and Friends of St. Mary's, St. Patrick's and St. Peter's Cathedral:

The Christian faith is oriented toward the future action, the coming Kingdom, of God. In our era both our material satisfactions and the easy relativism of our culture can dull our hope for the Kingdom of heaven. We are tempted to imagine that we have it all here and now. We are tempted to imagine that there is no judgment or challenge on the way to the future God has prepared for us.

All of our readings today call us back to the need to hope for a greater future and they call us to remember that we are not there yet and to strive to be ready and worthy. The first reading reminds us that Israel in Egypt "awaited the salvation of the just and the destruction of their foes." The second reading from Hebrews reminds us that Abraham was a sojourner whose faith enabled him to cling to the promises of God.

In the Gospel Jesus employs a very short parable to encourage his disciples to be alert to the coming judgment and also to hope for the abundance of God's love and mercy. They (and we) are to be like responsible servants awaiting their master's return. That point is simple enough, but then comes a significant twist. If the Lord finds us thus responsible, he will gird himself and wait on us. The irony is wondrous. The Master will wait on the slaves. They will recline at table, the posture of free people in the ancient world. Here we see a reminder of the Eucharist, in which the Lord waits on us. And the Eucharist always points to the great feast of the Kingdom of God.

The world urges us to settle for material and psychological satisfactions. The Scriptures urge us to want much more: the infinite love and goodness of God. We are called to live now as people who expect a great inheritance.

Again there is not much to report on my recovery. I am slowly gaining strength and working more. In the next weeks I may face some challenges from graft versus host disease. These can crop up as I am tapered off the anti-rejection medicine. They are manageable, but because of the uncertainty I will continue to schedule only one Mass a Sunday.

In Christ,
Fr. Klein
